DEMOCRATS GET TO WORK.

GOING TO HAVE SOME BIG RATI-FICATION MEETINGS AT ONCE.

Gov. Hill to be Invited Hero and to Brooklyn-The Candidates Meet the Executive Committee-A "Bilver" Before "Dollar" in the Currency Plank-County Democrats to Come Out for the Tieket.

The candidates on the Democratic State ticket seemed to recognize that yesterday's meeting of the Executive Committee of the State Committee marked the opening of the campaign, and only Secretary of State Rice and Treasurer Elliot Danforth falled to put in an appearance. They were unavoidably detained by official business. In the Hoffman House corridors were also gathered many of the sturdy Democrats of the rank and file, whose interest in the gathering was neither that of candidates nor committeemen, but which was not less in loyalty and earnestness on that secount. Among them was J. J. Richardson. the Iowa member of the National Democratic Committee, full of encouraging news about the canvass that Gov. Horace E. Boies is making for reflection out there, a canvass that is making the Republicans worry very seriously. There was Edward P. Hagan resting quietly in the recollection of the promise Charles A. Stadler made two years age not to run for Senator again. There was John Scaunell, whose friends want to run him for Congress, but who will never seek the nomination, though he might not refuse it if it came to him. There was Editor Burdge of the Spencer Herald, a Tioga county man, whose esemblance to Platt is very marked, and Theophilus C. Callicott of the Albany Times, a mine of political wisdom and experience. There were ex-Congressman John Quinn, Justice Welde, Thomas F. Grady, District Attorney James W. Ridgway of Brooklyn, Col. John Gaynor of Utica, who says that the Republican platform's excise plank is on the ines he made famous in 1885, and wonders what the friends of Warner Miller are going to do about it; Major J. B. Hinkley, ex-Congressman Charles L. Turner, Assemblyman Blumenthal, Alderman Harris, Coroner Levy, Col. Webster, Senator Jacob A. Cantor, Col. George B. McClellan, Assemblyman Charles P. Mc Cicliand, William A. Poucher, and many

Then there were the committeemen. Col. Daniel S. Lamont, alert, energetic, and neryous, was in conspicuous contrast to Hugh McLaughlin, quiet, cool, and reposeful, except as to his restless eyes. D. Cady Herrick kept pretty close to Cord Meyer, Jr., who was a committeeman with him when the campaigns of '85 and '88 were on. Amos J. Cummings, who seemed to know more men and have more questions asked him than any of the others, was ubiquitous, while Police Commissioner John R. Voorhis was scarcely seen in the corridors. Yet the reticent Clerk De Freest so far forgot himself in giving the official report of

About 3:30 the session began, and for an hour Room 28d of the Hoffman House was sealed to the outside world. Down stairs in Mr. Flower's room, 311, the candidates conterted, but did not appear before the committee. Mr. Flower exchanged views with William F. Sheehan who runs for Lieutenant-Governor; Frank Campbell, the candidate for Comptroller; Simon W. Rosendale, who is in the race for Attorney-General, and Martin Schenck, the candidate for State Engineer and Surveyor.

He also welcomed a delegation from the Harlam Club of the Democratic political perguasion, who have arranged for a grand World's Fair demonstration in honor of his services in the cause of the World's Fair for New York. The subject is very near the hearts of all of the inhabitants of the city, especially above Fity-ninth street, and an imposing urnout is counted on. The committee consisted of Dr. J. H. Demarest of the Sagamore Club, Dr. N. Carvalho of the Lexington Club, John A. Mason of the Harlem Democratic Club, and William H. Burke of the Suyvesant Club, Mr. Flower told them that be would be with them on any night convenient for them after Oct 18. So it is probable that Tuesday, Oct 18, will be selected. The Committee on Plan and Scope will meet to-morrow westing at the Manhattanville Democratic Club, bean franklin of the Tilden Democratic Club, and William H. Burke of the Suyvesant Club. The Chairman and clerk of the Executive Committee were made ex officio mombors of all the subsemilitees, and it was ordered that the next meeting should be at the call of the Chair. All of the details of the work of immediately opening the campaign headquarters and putting things in running order were referred to Chairman Griffin and Clerk De Freest. The latter said that he would have to go back to Troy to get his books and papers, but would be on hand again in twelve hours.

With this routine work out of the way, the committee men began to talk politics and discuss the real business of the campaign. Much of the detail concerned the times and places of earth big efforts and matters that are never advertised for the information of the Salver Papers with the salver committee was satisfied with all of this testimony.

The subject of ratification meetings, especially in New York and Brooklyn, was carefully considered in view of the fact that the Republicans have made some efforts in that direction. It is usually the custom, especially in Tresidential years, to wait until the local tickets are in the field before arranging for big domonstrations. The sentiment of the committee was in favor of a change from this practice, and the organization as separate and early ratification meetings for the State ticket. The purpose, as expressed, was to make them patable in both cities with the speakers of the lighest class. The matter was left in the hands of the Committee on Speakers, except that the Executive Committee passed a resolution instructing them to invite Gov. Hill to be the principal orator at these important demonstrations.

Both before and after the meeting all of the

Both before and after the meeting all of the visiting committeemen and others were eagerly questioned as to their opinion of the outlook. As expressed those opinions may be opitomized in the words of Chairman Griffin, who said: said:

"We are not talking any nonsense about the situation. We do not pretend to say that a political contest involving the votes of a million citizens can be claimed in advance as settled one way or the other beyond question or cavil. But a study of the whole question, with the assistance of all the men whose knowledge of States affairs I have confidence in has shown me he teason why the Democrats should not be successful and overwhelmingly so. The talk about disaffection, though only referring to very restricted districts, is very much exaggorated. As a matter of fact, there is not as much of it as usual. And it comes at a good time, the beginning of the campaign. It will be all over long before election day."

Among the letters received by Candidate Flower yesterday was one from ex-Congressman Quinn, which said:

"Few men in public life have had better opportunities of knowing with what zeal and ability you fought for and guarded every interest pertaining to our city. State, and nation during your career in Congress. Heat assured no man will work with more carnestness from now until the close of the polls on election day to secure your triumphant election to a position which, politically speaking, will be only a halting place on the highway to the White House, to the Presidency of this great republic."

LOCAL EXPUBLICAN DATES.

Mr. Patterson's Committee in Favor of Straight Local Ticket.

The Republican County Executive Committee met in its rooms in the Tribune building yesterday, Jacob M. Patterson presiding.

The primaries to elect delegates to the various local nominating conventions were appointed for Saturday evening. These are the lates selected for the conventions: County Oct. 8. Grand Opera House hall: Congress. Senate, and Aldermanic, Oct. 10, and sembly, except the Twenty-fourth district. Oct. 12. The Twenty-fourth district convention will be held on Oct. 10. The convention of the Tenth judicial district to nominate a successor to Civil Justice A. J. Rogers will be held at 2.063 Third avenue on Oct. 10 also.

The Executive Committee issued orders for their paster ballots for the coming election, and requested the Committee on Naturalization to continue its work in the Executive Committee's rooms. It was decided to hold a mass meeting in some big half on Oct. 17 or thereabouts. Mr. Fassett will have returned from his talking trip up the state by that time, and it is the Committee's intention to have him, Senator Hiscock, and Dr. Depew for the orators of the evening.

It is the idea of the committee to have a series of ratification meetings in each of the Congress districts after the opening big mass meeting. Mr. Fassett is to be pressed into this service for about eight days.

The members of the committee favor a straight local ticket. There's not much in sight worth trading fos. tion will be held on Oct. 10. The convention

This was in addition to any number of foreign-born people who came for information and were referred to various Tammany leaders for red tickets which would entitle them to receive the assistance of the Naturalization Committee. The Campbell-McKinley Debate.

COLUMBUS. O., Sept. 29.—Chairmen Neal and Hahn of the Democratic and Republican State Executive Committees had some correspondence yesterday and to-day relative to a series of joint debates between Major McKinley and Gov. Campbell. Mr. Neal proposed eight joint meetings, but Mr. Hahn declined to enter into meetings, but Mr. Hahn declined to enter into the arrangement for the reason, as he said, that meetings had been arranged for Major McKinley daily until election day, with the exception of Oct. 9. He offered to accept for this date, and to arrange for two meetings. Mr. Neal insisted upon the series of eight, and offered to cancel Gov. Campbell's engagements in order to have the joint debates. The indications are that there will be only one joint debate between the leaders of the two great parties, and that one will be the meeting already advertised for Ada, Ohlo, on Thursday afternoon, Oct. 8.

A mass of 3,000 excited men and women, intent upon securing a lot, had gathered about the boundary of the town. They clambered up the steep eliff like soldiers charging a fortress. The line was one mile long on each side and a half mile long on each end. The rush was toward lot 38, which was reserved for a Court House. As the angles of the advancing lines met many ridors were unbersed and hurled pell-mell into the road. A HORROR OF FOUR YEARS AGO. The Story of the Murder of 34 Chinese Has

San Francisco, Sept. 20.-Vice-Consul Bee of the Chinese Legation here has just received from Walla Walla the statement of Hugh Mo-Millan, which throws light on the murder of thirty-four Chinese miners on Snake River four years ago. In April, 1887, a report came from Idaho of the discovery of over twenty dead bodies of Chinese found floating down the river. All had gunshot wounds. Detectives were sent by the Chinese Consulate into the Snake River country, but they returned declaring it was a paradise of renegades and cattle thieves, and no clue could be found. McMillan now makes a statement which was given him by his son Robert, 16 years old. just before the lad's death.

Young McMillan, Bruce Evans, Hiram Maynard, Carl Hughes, "Lide" Canfield, Max Larue, and Frank Vaughn were in a cattle camp near the Snake River when some one suggested that they clean out a neighboring camp of Chinese miners. Armed with revolvers and Winchesters, they surprised camp and killed twelve Chinese, only one escaping, wounded. All the bodies were thrown into the river. They searched the camp and obtained over $5,000 in gold dust. On the next day four of the party returned to look for the wounded Chinese They found him in a boat and beat out his brains. Then they discovered eight Chinese coming down the river. These they ambushed and murdered and threw their bodies into the river. Not content with this, they started up the river to another Chinese camp, where thirteen men worked, and the same bloody work was repeated. The unarmed Chinese could offer no resistance. All were shot and the bodies were cast into the river. Here the murderers found a large amount of gold dust, estimated at $50,000, which they divided. The scene of the murders was in Wallowa county. ALABAMA PAYING THE FIDDLER NOW Gov. Jones Shows Why the State Should

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Sept. 20.—In a speech in Camden county to-day Gov. Thomas G. Jones formally accepted the issue of the pending campaign as being the Democracy against the

He charged the Alliance with the defeat of the soldiers' home in Georgia, saying: "They humiliated Georgia before the world." He combatted the Alliance idea in detail, but his strongest point was his reference to Alabama history as a warning against the Sub-Treasury scheme and the Government land-loan idea. He said on this subject:

"As we all know, the State of Alabama once indulged in the business of banking or loaning noney to the people. The panic of 1837, however, caused great depression and suffering in Alabama. A cry came up from the people that the State came up from the people that the State must come to the rescue by lending the people money. A called session of the Legislature was had, and in June, 1837, the State issued $5,000,000 of bonds, which were sold at par and loaned through the banks to the people. The loans were required to be apportioned according to population in the several counties, and no individual could borrow more than $2,000. The loans were to be at 7 per cent. Interest, secured by two good and sufficient sureties, and, when required, by a deed of trust on real estate and slaves.

Men of ability and honesty conducted the banks, but they soon failed, entailing a flood of litigation and distress upon the people. The State was compelled to wind up the banks and the taxpayers had to foot the bills, which were enormous. In the debt compromise of 1870, the bonds issued by the State to raise money to loan to the people were not scaled, though the rate of interest was reduced. This $5,000,000 issue of bonds now bears 4 per cent. interest, and the State pays $200,000 interest per annum on them. The State also put into the banks the university fund, the sixteenth section fund, and the surplus revenue fund. All these trust funds were swallowed up in the operations of the banks, and in consequence the State now pays yearly for interest on these trust funds in round numbers more than $102,000.

The people of Alabama are paying to-day $362,000 interest per year, or nearly a thousand dollars a day, on account of a mistake on this into which our ancestors made fifty years ago." must come to the rescue by lending

She had a hat pin in her hand which she had been fingering during the examination, and, as her husband turned his back to her to leave the platform, she russhed at him, and, burying the hat pin in his shoulder, shouted, "I'll get even with you, any way, you liar."

He bought the store for her, it was said, and she acknowledged getting money from him. The other caller was known as her steady company and his name was John Tilhiman. He was about 35 and he lived up town.

No one ever saw the two men togother. Thilman called in the evening usually and Basic often left Mrs. Dorn and him together after she had closed the store. The old man called two or three times a week in the afterneon. He tapped on the basement window to be let in.

It seemed as if Mrs. Dorn were anxious that the two men should not meet, for one day last week when Tihlman was visiting her in the store she saw the old man at the window. She hurrled Tilhiman out and ran across the street so excitedly that she forgot to fasten the side door of her store, where she had let Tihlman out into the hall. "I hope the pain won't come back to-day," she told Rosie yesterday morning, "but if I don't come over to the store by 10 o'clock go for Dr. Muller in Tenth street." Dr. Muller is physician of a lodge that Mrs. Dorn belongs to.

About 1 o'clock the old man called we see Mrs. Dorn. Ten minutes after he had gone away Rosie heard Mrs. Dorn call her and ran across the street. From the sidewalk she saw Mrs. Dorn lying on a lounge in front of the window.

As Rosie was about to speak to her. Mrs. Dorn put a pistol to her breast and fired. Although no one had heard the report, this was evidently the second time she had shot herself, for Dr. Muller and the ambulance surgeon found two pistol bullet wounds in her breast over her heart. She was taken to Bellevue, and the doctors think she will die.

Somewhere in her history is another tragedy which this letter refers to. The letter was found beside her, written in pencil on the back of an "El Dorado" programme:

Miss Nanny Anderson of 341 Clinton street, Brooklyn, is missing from St. Joseph's Academy in Flushing. She returned to school on Vednesday of last week after the summer vacation. It was warm the next morning and between 8 and 9 o'clock she received permission to go to her room and change her dress. She came out again attired in a green-colored dress and black lace hat and left the grounds. Nothing has been heard of her at the academy since. She took along her pocketbook, which

We have made inquiries in all directions where we supposed she might have gone, but so far we have got no trace of her. We have not been able even to trace her to Long Island City, although she was supposed to have taken a team in that direction, and the probability is that she is still somewhere on Long Island. She was not simple-minded or headstrong, as has been reported, but, on the contrary, was good-natured and easily managed. It is not true also, that an attachment exists between her and a young medical student boarding here. Moreover the medical student is still here and has not been absent during the past week. My daughter has been reading novels recently, and probably some romantic ideas which have come into her mind may have caused her to run away from the convent. I still think that she will be found with some friends."

Following is a description of the girl: "Age 21 years, height 5 feet 5 inches, light brown hair, fair complexion, large blue eyes, full face, had several rings on her fingers, one a large camee, and wore a broad, black lace hat, with plak flowers, dark green marine dress with voivet sleeves, and carried a black satchel and sun umbrolla."

Police and the Courts. The police of Capt. Gunner's precinct have been looking up the character of the woman who was arrested on Sunday night for depositing an infant on the stoop of the house 51 East Sixty-fifth street. It has been found that on Feb. 20, 1890, she was arrested for disor-derly conduct and loitering on the street. She Acceived a six months' sentence in the Harlem Court, but Thomas Jetter, a butcher of Third avenue and Eighty-ninth street, furnished bonds for her good behavior. A few months ago she was agnin arrested in Harlem for assaulting a policeman. The same man saved her from punishment. Mrs. Dell sent word to Jetter on Monday to come to her assistance, but he says that he has done with the woman. So Mrs. Dell is locked up in the Yorkville Court prison pending examination.

She gave her address as 203 East 100th street, but she left that place over two months ago. One of the tenants says that while she was there she had five or six children with her, which she said were her own.

When the case comes up for examination Charles T Ferguson of 1.100 Second avenue will make another complaint against her. He has positively identified her as the woman who left a child in East Sixty-third street on the night of July 14.

They Go All Alone with the Men of Their Choice to St. Mark's Church—One More Marriage than the Rector Had Expected, but His Assistant Took Care of It.

It will be a genuine surprise to friends of the family to learn this morning that Miss Olivia Hoe and Miss Laura Hoe, daughters of Robert Hoe, were married yesterday morning at St. Mark's Church without notice, it is said. to their family.

Miss Olivia Hoe was married to Mr. Henry Lowis Slade of the Calumet Club and the Lacrosse Club, the Rev. Dr. J. H. Rylance, rector of the church, performing the ceremony. Her sister was married by the Rev. Richard Cobden to Ernest Trow Carter. Mr. Carter is a young graduate of Princeton, class of 1888, nd is a lawyer at 49 Broadway.

The news of the double marriage was certainly a surprise to a number of friends of the family of the brides, to whom it was told last night.

Mr. Robert Hoe, the father of the brides, who is the eminent builder of printing presses, is out of town with his family.

At his residence at 11 East Thirty-sixth street it was said last night that all of the family were out of town. Mrs. Hoe was at the house for a short time yesterday, but had departed again.

The news of the double wedding came to THE SUN office in the shape of these two advertisements late last night: CARTRE—HOR.—On Tuesday, Sept. 39, 1801, at St. Mark's Church, by the Rev. Richard Cobden, Laura, daughter of Robert Hos, to Ernest Trow Carter.

BLADE—HOE.—On Tuesday, Sept. 29, 1801, at St. Mark's Church, by the Rev. Dr. J. H. Bylance, Olivia, daughter of Robert Hoe, to Henry Lewis Slade. The notices were endorsed by George W. Hamill, sexton of St. Mark's. He knew nothing more, he said, than that he had been directed to send the notices down. He did not see the weddings.

It was learned elsewhere that several days ago Miss Olivia Hoe and Mr. Slade had called on the Rev. Dr. Rylance and told him that they were going to get married, and wanted him to perform the ceremony.

Dr. Bylance is acquainted with the Hos family, and he also knew that Mrs. Hoe, the girl's mother, was epposed to the match. But as he saw that the two were firmly decided upon marrying, and as they were of lawful age, he agreed to perform the ceremony in the church yesterday morning. Yesterday morning came and Dr. Rylance found Miss Hoe and her prospective bridegroom waiting for him at the church. With them were another young man and young WOMAN. These Miss Hoe said were the witnesses, and they were the only witnesses present at the seremony besides Dr. Rylance's assistant, the Rev. Richard Cobden.

Dr. Rylance read the marriage service from the prayer book while the couple knelt before him. The work of recording the marriage and receiving the signatures of the witnesses Dr. Rylance had left to his assistant. He was very much astonished when he turned around presently and found that the "witnesses" were making arrangements to get married them-selves by the Rev. Mr. Cobden. Then for the first time Dr. Rylance noticed that the young woman who had been a witness was Miss

Her escort was Mr. Carter, and in a few minutes the Rev. Mr. Cobden had made them man and wife. Mr. and Mrs. Slade returned the favor by entering their names as witnesses of this second wedding.

Mr. Slade is a son of Jarvis Slade of 11

West Tenth street, and a brother of George P. Slade, Treasurer of the New York, Manhattan, and Central Real Estate Associations of 110 Leonard street, and one of the managers of the Merchants' Club. A curious coincidence that the reporters ran across in looking for particulars of the marriage lay in the street numbers of the residences of the persons concerned. The number eleven runs through them oddly. For in-Robert Hoe, 11 East Thirty-sixth street. Henry Lewis Slade, 11 West Tenth street.

THE STAR THEATRE HAUNTED

SO AN OLD WATCHMAN SAYS AND AN

ENGINEER'S ASSISTANT. James Wallack's Chost Used to Walk There, and Now They Are Seeing Lester Wal-lack's-Maybe It is Only an Old Picture. There is something the matter under the stage of the Star Theatre. Several of the employees assert that there is a ghost there. An engineer's assisiant says that he saw the thing on Friday night after the performance, when he had occasion to go to the theatre cellar. It was dressed in white, with a head resembling Lester Wallack's.

Mr. Theodore Mosa said that there couldn't possibly be any ghost there, and that the engineer must be dreaming. The assistant engineer declared, however, that he wouldn't go down stairs again. He insisted upon it that there was something queer there.

Watchman Johnson of Palmer's Theatre says that Mr. Moss is mistaken in asserting that the ghost is a myth. Mr. Johnson was that the ghost is a myth. Mr. Johnson was watchman for years at the Starwhen it was called Wallack's Theatre. He knew both Lester Wallack and his father, and he asserts that he often heard the elder Wallack's footstep and cane come tramping along the corridor, followed by Lester Wallack's step long after the theatre was closed up. Lester Waffack was alive then, but his father had been dead for some years. The elder Wallack had a gouty foot and was compelled to use a cane.

Mr. Moss says that he has tried to convince Watchman Johnson that this vision was mere fancy, but the watchman swears that he saw the ghost, and that he doesn't care whether the statement is believed or not by other folks. It was suggested has night that old portraits stored in the cellar may have been the substance of the latest ghost story.

The high pressure that was closely following the storm in the lake regions yesterday overspread the Ohio Valley and lake regions last night, travelling apidly into the Atlantic States with cooler weather The storm centre had passed northeast to the mouth of the St. Lawrence, attended by high winds over the lakes and the New England coast, and brisk winds on the middle Atlantic coast. The temperature fell 10 degrees to 22 degrees in the lake regions, and a fall of 15 degrees to 20 degrees should take place this morning in this neighborhood, with fair weather. This depression has caused a rise of 10 to 20 degrees in temperature over the upper Mississippi States, and colder weather in the extreme Northwest, with snow in British Columbia. This storm is likely to be the most severe so far this season, and its course will probably be toward the lake region. Rain fell in this city yesterday afternoon lowering the temperature 10 degrees.
